Pro-Life President Donald Trump Sworn in as President

by Micaiah Bilger

Shown here is President Donald Trump as he is sworn in on Friday, January 20. Also pictured is his family as they surround him as he lays his hand on the Bible that former President Ronald Reagan used at his Inauguration.

Pro-life groups celebrated the inauguration of President Donald Trump and his commitment to pro-life policies on Friday, marking the end of an eight-year struggle to protect lives under a pro-abortion White House administration. Trump, who has committed to being a pro-life president, and Vice President Mike Pence, a strong pro-life leader throughout his government service, were sworn into office at noon Friday January 20 as the 45th presidential leaders of the United States. In his address, President Trump promised to bring changes to America and to protect the “forgotten” people.

Pro-life leaders are hopeful that the Trump administration will include unborn babies among those whose rights were “forgotten” under the President Barack Obama administration. Many who were skeptical about the sincerity of his views felt reassured when he chose Pence and other strong pro-life leaders to help run his administration.

In the past few months, Trump promised to nominate pro-life justices to the U.S. Supreme Court and to sign a bill to ban late-term abortions on unborn babies who can feel pain. He also vowed to sign a bill to defund Planned Parenthood and redirect tax dollars to community health centers that provide comprehensive care without doing abortions. He said he also would make permanent the Hyde Amendment, which bans taxpayer funding for abortions in Medicaid.

tion will include unborn babies among those whose rights were “forgotten” under the President Barack Obama administration. “From the Cabinet, to the Supreme Court, to over 100 open federal judge seats, to the many other appointments, the next 100 days and beyond are critical and we need to surround the President in prayer to make wise decisions,” said Mat Staver, Founder and Chairman of Liberty Counsel. “We are standing on the verge of major change that will reverberate around the world.”

President Donald Trump Signs Executive Order Banning Funding for Abortion From LifeNews.Com

Shown here is President Trump as he signs an Executive Order which would ban all funds used for abortion by International Planned Parenthood. The President also took steps to defund UNFPA, a United Nations agency which promotes abortions worldwide.

Most pro-life Americans are anxiously awaiting Congress to pass a bill to defund the Planned Parenthood abortion business. While that defunding legislation concerns the domestic-based Planned Parenthood abortion corporation, President Trump has the ability to put in place an executive order that would revoke funding for its International affiliate.

When pro-abortion former President Barack Obama took office,

Obama overturned a policy that prevented funding of groups that promote or perform abortions overseas. The Mexico City Policy covered over $400 million in federal funds, part of which flowed to the abortion businesses International Planned Parenthood and Marie Stopes International for their foreign efforts. The order ensures U.S. foreign aid will continue to go to health care and humanitarian relief in the millions of dollars. It just will not subsidize abortion overseas.

Profane Speech at Pro-Abortion “Women’s March,” January 21 Madonna Talks About Blowing Up The White House

by Christine Rousselle

One of the celebrity speakers at Saturday’s Women’s March on Washington was singer Madonna. Staying rather true to her “Rebel Heart” persona, she did not hold back in her address to the crowd. In addition to thrice saying “f-k” live on television completely uncensored, she also admitted to having “thought an awful lot about blowing up the White House.”

Post-election, the “Material Girl” singer has continued to speak her mind against Trump and his proposed policies. It’s one thing to say a few curse words for shock value, but let’s be honest: if anyone other than a celebrity said something about wanting to blow up the White House, Secret Service would be knocking on their door. Those kinds of comments are completely inappropriate to make – especially in light of the violence on Friday – and that kind of rhetoric isn’t something to just joke about. Many of the women marching spoke out against “normalizing Trump.” We shouldn’t “normalize assassination” either.

Editor’s Note: This women’s march is just another example of leading good women down the wrong road. This was not a march for women’s equality; this was a hateful anti-Trump, pro-abortion march for those people who just can’t get over the fact that Hilary Clinton lost the election. Millions of dollars are being spent to fund this type of activity and keep the hate going. I saw on Channel 10 from Terre Haute a Catholic Nun who was leaving on a bus with others heading for DC. My question for this Catholic Nun: does she know what she is doing? Folks, get over this; go back to work and get ready for the next election. The major media of CBS, NBC, MSNBC, ABC and CNN and their liberal sidekicks only reported the crowd size and the positives of this march, nothing was reported to make it look bad. This has been this way all along as this same liberal media did not hide their bias for Hilary Clinton and their disdain for Donald Trump. On election night they were ready to break down and cry when they saw that Donald Trump was going to win. They could not contain their anger with the American people, and they predicted doom and gloom for the future. Of course they could not look beyond their liberal agenda. I am not sure if these people will ever get over it. As long as George Soros is funding this type of activity it will just keep it going. I hate to say this but I am afraid the media and these liberal groups will keep this hate and discontent going and will not give the President or the country rest from their complaining. At this point all we can do is pray for them and our Country. May God Bless the United States of America!

A Baby May Change Your Life, But That Doesn't Mean Your Life Is Over

By Halie, National Right to Life News

It was Friday, Feb. 13, 2015, a normal day like any other. I got out of school at 10:25 a.m., went to my internship and worked. When I got off work, I went home and waited for my boyfriend, Jordan, to get off work and come home. It had been over a month since I'd had a period, so Jordan was bringing a pregnancy test over. I took it, and it was positive. How could it be? I was 17, worried and scared.

I called Your Choice Resource Center and made an appointment, and thankfully, Jordan stuck by my side. My first appointment was Feb. 20. I walked in, filled out the forms, and was called to the back to see a nurse. Another positive test. But, before we took the test, the nurse opened her Bible and helped me to understand that – no matter what – God still loved me. Then, we looked at the different stages the baby goes through in the womb. What a miracle!

After our talk, where the nurse answered my questions, prayed with me and helped to calm my fears, I went into another room to get an ultrasound. There he was: eight weeks in the womb, a tiny little peanut. I couldn't believe my eyes. I left feeling like I was on top of the world, but as the day wore on, I was worried about Jordan and I telling our parents. Still, I knew I would live, and it would be alright in the end. When we did tell my parents, my mom took it lighter than I thought she would, but my dad didn't speak to me for a little while.

Jordan, Halie and J.C. in November, 2016

There were times I wanted to give up, but I knew God was with me, and so was Jordan. Our baby boy was born Sept. 10, 2015 – three weeks early, but healthy, and I wouldn't change it for the world. We named him Jordan Colin, "J.C." for short. He's healthy, happy and our little miracle. I hope that every pregnant, worried and scared teenage girl has the opportunity to go to a pregnancy center. I had a great, helpful, and unforgettable experience. Everyone was so helpful and kind.

Jordan and I got married Oct. 3, 2015. I was a senior in high school when I got pregnant, but I made straight A's and graduated. Now, I'm going to college. To all the worried pregnant teenage girls, do not give up. A baby may change your life, but that doesn't mean your life is over. You can make the best of your situation.

We're active members of our church and we are putting God first in our family. I thank God for a place like Your Choice. Without them, who knows what path I would've taken.

Halie is part of a team of seven moms who will bring their babies to Washington, D.C. this January 26 as part of Heartbeat International's Babies Go to Congress. The moms will each have a chance to tell their their congressmen on Capitol Hill their story of how pregnancy help organizations have helped them welcome their children.

Abortions Have Dropped 43% Since 1990, 673,800 Fewer Babies Die From Abortion

By Dave Andrusko, Editor of National Right to Life

The Guttmacher Institute's long-awaited new report hit the Internet this morning and the bottom line is wonderful news. There were 926,200 abortions in 2014, the lowest figure of babies lost since 1974! Compare that with 1990 when there were 1.6 million abortions and the incredible impact of your legislative, educational, and political efforts is undeniable. Even Guttmacher concedes "the wave of abortion restrictions passed at the state level over the last five years could also have contributed to the decline by making it more difficult for women to access needed services in highly restrictive states," according to Rachel Jones and Jenna Jerman. Here are just a few highlights from the report: There were 32,500 fewer abortions in 2014 than in 2013: 926,000 versus 958,200. The latest figure is a 12.5% drop from 2011 when Guttmacher reported 1.06 million abortions.

If You Could Only See

If the uterus were transparent and your eyes could see,
Would you still subject your child to such a cruel atrocity?
If you saw the innocent struggle to escape the doctor's knife,
Would you still be so determined to end your baby's life?
Could you watch as scissors are inserted into your baby's brain?
As forceps tear your child apart, could you watch lifeblood drain?
Or as drugs block his nutrition and starvation takes its toll;
Maybe torture as his skull is crushed, would that affect your soul?

Evil has created many ways to soon dispose
Of unwanted babies with their worries and their woes.
One thing that's been forgotten in all the stress and strife,
Many a baby suffers in the quest to end his life.
Other women want a chance to have a baby of their own;
One would take your child to love and nurture 'til he's grown.
So please have compassion for a life that's just begun.
Give a child the gift of life; by doing so you've won.

Woman Gives Birth to Quadruplets While Fighting Cancer

By Nancy Flanders, National Right to Life News

When Kayla Gaytan called her husband Sergeant Charles Gaytan to tell him that she was pregnant, neither one could have been more excited. Kayla Gaytan had just beaten Hodgkin's Lymphoma and had endured five months of chemotherapy. It had only been a month since completing chemotherapy and doctors told her that the chances of having more children were slim.

The newlyweds were already parents to Ethan and Harper, and after beating cancer, another baby was a miracle they hadn't been expecting. Then, they were handed a second, third, and fourth miracle: they had naturally conceived quadruplets. While a pregnancy of multiples comes with a lot of risks, this pregnancy had no major complications. "My original goal to make was 34 weeks because I figured if I could beat cancer, surely I could make it to 34 weeks with quads," Kayla Gaytan told News 2 in Fort Campbell.

However, before she could make it to her goal, Kayla Gaytan noticed symptoms of her cancer beginning to return. A biopsy confirmed her fears. The couple was devastated. "She'd worked really hard to [fight] it the first time, and to come back and have to go through it all again, it breaks my heart," said her husband. Shortly after the diagnosis, Charles Gaytan reached out for support on the family's Go Fund Me page, saying, "With a heavy heart, we along with our medical team decided to deliver the babies by C Section at 30 weeks. As Kayla needs to begin treatment right away."

On December 30 doctors safely delivered the couple's four babies. Lillian, Victoria, Michael, and Charles were all healthy, with the smallest weighing just two pounds, eight ounces. The children will need to spend over a month in the neonatal intensive care unit. "It was exciting. It was nerve-wracking," said Kayla Gaytan. "But to see them when they all came out and to hear them crying, that was really exciting." In about a week, Kayla Gaytan will begin another round of chemotherapy. She has a 50/50 chance of surviving for five years. "We know that (God has) got to have a different plan up there for us, and surely everything's going to work out in the end," Kayla Gaytan said.

Clash Looming Over Repeal and Replace ObamaCare

By Dave Andrusko, National Right to Life News

As the final post of the day, a quick rehash of two developments many of you have already heard about.

"The first order of business is to repeal and replace ObamaCare, and that was our message today and that will be our message on Capitol Hill," Pence told reporters after meeting with Congressional Republicans, NBC News reported. Lame Duck President Barack Obama "met behind closed doors Wednesday morning with congressional Democrats to map out a strategy to defend the Affordable Care Act [ObamaCare] and other health-care policies."

Meanwhile pro-abortion Senate Minority Leader Chuck Schumer (D-NY) was busy rattling sabers. In an interview with CNN's Dana Bash Schumer said, "The only way we're going to work with [Trump] is if he moves completely in our direction and abandons his Republican colleagues." For good measure, Schumer added, "95 percent of the time, we'll be holding his feet to the fire and holding him accountable."

In case anyone may have been naïve enough to think pro-abortion Senate Democrats would not go full-throttle after any Supreme Court nominee President-elect Trump would offer, there's this from Schumer's appearance last night on MSNBC's Rachel Maddow Show. He flatly announced Senate Democrats are prepared to block "out of the mainstream" Supreme Court nominees.

According to NBC News: "The consequences are going to be down the road," Schumer said. "If they don't appoint somebody good, we're going to oppose them tooth and nail." Asked by Maddow whether he would seek to simply keep the seat open rather than confirm a nominee outside the mainstream, Schumer replied: "Absolutely. We are not going to make it easy for them to pick a Supreme Court justice," he said. Suggesting that could be any nominee, he said: "It's hard for me to imagine a nominee that Donald Trump would choose that would get Republican support that we [Democrats] could support."

In 2013, Schumer's predecessor in the Senate's leadership ranks, Harry Reid (D-Nev.), led the charge to eliminate the filibuster for presidential appointments, except to the Supreme Court. Schumer told Maddox that Republicans "won't have 60 votes to put in an out-of-the-mainstream nominee [on the Supreme Court] and then they'll have to make a choice: Change the rules."

Some Unfinished Business from the 2016 Election

By Louis Kavanaugh Jr.

I was asked during the recent election if I ever received negative comments regarding our Right to Life signs that ask the question, "If Your Vote Supports Abortion, What Will Happen to Your Soul?" The answer to that question is yes; but we received very few negative comments and many more positive comments about the signs. I really believe those negative comments came from people who were uncomfortable seeing those signs and it made them think, and they really did not like what they felt. Sometimes you have to call a spade a spade. The idea for this came from our friends in Evansville who promoted the idea, and all across southern Indiana these signs popped up.

Now it really does not bother me when I hear comments from pro-abortion people as I know where they are coming from; but when I hear comments from people that I know are against abortion, that really gets to me. These people just don't seem to think about what they are doing when they vote for candidates who support abortion. They try to justify their action by saying there are other issues when voting. I think what some of the United States Catholic Bishops are doing is very disturbing to the pro-life movement by their selection of certain life issues they deem more important than abortion. The Bishops put immigration as a high priority as they make public statements on that issue but rarely say anything about the abortion issue. I think this past election was a rejection of this line of thinking. We must be open to accepting immigrants, but at the same time we must be careful where they are coming from; and if they cannot be checked out, then we have an obligation to protect the people here by not letting them into our country. Look at what is happening in Germany and other countries who let these people in and are now facing terrorism on a major scale. We are already facing that situation in our country now.

On another note, during the election we heard in the debates how Hillary Clinton favored the killing of the unborn up to the time of birth while Donald Trump rejected this line of thinking. In numerous polls since the election, people who were not big supporters of the pro-life movement stated this statement by Mrs. Clinton was a red flag and this moved them. Of course, for those who support abortion, this was what they wanted to hear. Recently I read in National Right to Life News where there was a 13% swing by women voters who voted pro-life over those women voting pro-abortion.

Another facet about voting pro-life that really bothers me is the good Christian people who say they are pro-life but don't carry that into the voting booth. That was brought to light recently when I read an article in Our Sunday Visitor. It was talking about a lady who was with a group that prayed at an abortion clinic, and when she was talking to her fellow prayer warriors and they were talking about abortion legal up to the time of birth, this lady had no idea that was possible. She thought it was just legal in the first trimester. People like this have also been known to work at Pregnancy Care Centers and when someone mentions to them about not voting for pro-abortion Democrats they look at you in disbelief. They have always voted that way, and they don't seem to realize that when they vote for pro-abortion candidates they are supporting abortion. They just don't seem to get it! Thank goodness more people are getting the message.

As we inaugurate our new President, Donald Trump, we look ahead to the future of this country with optimism. This past election, pro-lifers were elected in record numbers and the prospects look good for getting something done. But we still have many pro-abortion democrats in congress, and judges who legislate from the bench will do everything they can to block all pro-life legislation. Over the last several years major pro-life legislation has been passed in several state legislatures, but we still do not have that majority on the U.S. Supreme Court that would give a knockout blow to the abortion laws in our country. We have made major gains in the past few years, so now let us pray for the success of those leaders in moving forward in protecting the unborn.

Indiana's Pro-Life U.S. Reps Vote to End Taxpayer Funding of Abortion

WASHINGTON – Today, seven of Indiana's U.S. representatives voted for H.R. 7, the No Taxpayer Funding for Abortion Act. The pro-life representatives who voted to bar taxpayer funding of abortion were: Reps. Jackie Walorski (IN-2), Jim Banks (IN-3), Todd Rokita (IN-2), Susan Brooks (IN-5), Luke Messer (IN-6), Larry Bucshon (IN-8) and Trey Hollingsworth (IN-9).

The No Taxpayer Funding for Abortion Act makes permanent the Hyde Amendment, which is credited with saving the lives of two million Americans. The White House issued a statement saying President Donald Trump will sign H.R. 7 into law when it reaches his desk.

"We extend our hearty thanks to Indiana's seven pro-life representatives who voted to protect taxpayers and protect life," said Mike Fichter, President and CEO of Indiana Right to Life. "Hoosiers do not want to fund the destruction of human life. We're pleased the No Taxpayer Funding for Abortion Act passed the House with the support of Reps. Walorski, Banks, Rokita, Brooks, Messer, Bucshon and Hollingsworth. We look forward to Congress next defunding Planned Parenthood of all taxpayer funds."

2017 – Eight Years Later, Real Hope and Change For Unborn Babies

By Carol Tobias

Eight years ago, we were told that newly elected pro-abortion President Barack Obama would bring “Hope and Change” to America. On November 8, America resoundingly rejected his policies. By electing pro-life Donald Trump, voters obviously weren’t interested in continuing Obama’s legacy which, as right-to-lifers know, was disastrous for unborn children. President-elect Trump’s victory signaled the country wished to move in the opposite direction of where Obama was taking us, a direction Hillary Clinton promised to continue.

President Obama was active on the campaign trail for Clinton, asking voters to support her as a way to continue his legacy. In an interview with radio host Tom Joyner, Obama stated, “Everything we’ve done is dependent on me being able to pass the baton to someone who believes in the same things I believe in. So if you really care about my presidency and what we’ve accomplished, then you are going to go and vote” (for Clinton, of course).

We recently found out how frightful a Clinton presidency (essentially Obama’s third term) would have been. Mike Allen, founder of axios.com and former reporter for Washington DC-based newspaper Politico, secured a list of the “ghost cabinet” Hillary Clinton’s campaign team had started to assemble so she would be ready to go once she “won” the election.

Allen wrote, “Hillary staffers and supporters had astonishingly specific, widely known/accepted roles planned for her administration. ‘Measuring the drapes’ is a cliché; a notional [hypothetical] org chart is real life.... By Election Day, her roster was so refined that most jobs just had one name.”

Who was slated for her administration? According to Allen, John Podesta was the leading candidate for Secretary of State; Loretta Lynch would likely have remained as Attorney General; and Neera Tanden would be Secretary of Health and Human Services. Ann O’Leary would head up the Domestic Policy Council and Maya Harris would have been Deputy Chief of Staff for Operations. Quite condescending was the notation by EPA (Environmental Protection Agency) that the appointee would be “likely an African American (and/or at Education).”

Who are these people? John Podesta was the Hillary Clinton campaign chairman whose emails were leaked by Wikileaks. Those emails showed him corresponding with an advisor who shared plans to overturn the Hyde Amendment. They also exposed Podesta, a Catholic, as having “transparent contempt for the teachings of the Church,” with “the intention of creating dissident ‘Catholic’ organizations bent on defeating (and if possible, changing) those teachings,” as described by Matthew J. Frank in the magazine First Things.

Neera Tanden is President of the Center for American Progress (CAP), a liberal think tank in Washington, DC. In an August 2015 Op-Ed for MSNBC, she attacked Congress for its efforts to defund Planned Parenthood. Last summer, she cheered the Supreme Court decision striking the Texas abortion law. There is absolutely no doubt, had she become Secretary of HHS, that she would have aggressively sought increased government help for Planned Parenthood and promoted abortion funding in ObamaCare.

Ann O’Leary was a Senior Fellow at CAP and a senior policy advisor on Hillary Clinton’s campaign. From September 1999 until he left office in 2001, O’Leary served as Special Assistant for Domestic Policy to President Bill Clinton. Her records at the Clinton Presidential Library show her work on various issues and are labeled: Abortion Safety, Abortion Clinic Violence, Partial Abortion (sic partial-birth abortion), and Women’s Choice. Again, there is no doubt that she would have helped to promote a pro-abortion agenda in another Clinton White House.

Maya Harris is an attorney, also a former senior fellow at CAP, and former Executive Director of ACLU of Northern California. She is the sister of Kamala Harris, the new EMILY’s List-endorsed senator from California. Kamala Harris was the California attorney general who raided the home of the Center for Medical Progress’ David Daleiden after he released undercover videos of Planned Parenthood officials haggling over pricing for body parts harvested from aborted babies.

Contrast that with the men and women Trump wants in his cabinet. I breathe a huge sigh of relief when I think of the pro-life people who will be serving in the Trump administration: Jeff Sessions as Attorney General, Tom Price as Secretary of HHS, Nikki Haley as Ambassador to the United Nations, Reince Priebus as Chief of Staff, Kellyanne Conway as Senior Advisor to the President, and many more. Unborn children will have staunch defenders and advocates at critical positions in the new administration. And, of course, we can’t forget President-elect Trump’s promise to appoint pro-life justices to the Supreme Court and defend the life-saving Hyde Amendment.

Our battle is a long way from being over. Proponents of abortion will fight harder than they ever have to keep the barbarity legal and available. But for the first time in eight years, there is real change with real hope for unborn babies.

Pro-Life Legislation Now Being Passed in Record Numbers

By Louis Kavanaugh Jr.

It has also been reported the Republican Party has grown and has expanded its reach in many states; it controls a record number of state legislatures across the country, the highest number in memory. Republicans now have used their electoral strength to pass a record number of new state-level anti-abortion laws. Overall, there were more state pro-life laws passed in recent years to reverse abortion than since the 1973 Supreme Court decision legalizing abortion. Conservative states have already enacted so much of the pro-life agenda that the pro-life movement is running out of things to do until a majority of pro-life judges can be appointed to the U.S. Supreme Court. Just since the 2016 election, Kentucky and Ohio State legislatures have passed more legislation that sends shock waves to the pro-abortion community. There are still those naysayers who say when Republicans are in charge, nothing gets done; well those people just don't know what they are talking about.

Revelations such as those from the Center for Medical Progress videos circulating on social media platforms, which the mainstream media has tried to ignore, cannot be ignored any longer. And it appears there's no telling when things could get better for the abortion movement. But when it comes to abortion, it has been a lesson in how the once unthinkable becomes the new normal—and this all happened with a Democrat (Obama) in the White House, and it could get even worse for the pro-abortion forces.

In past elections, voters who refused to cast a ballot for the best possible candidate are partially responsible for the havoc inflicted on our nation. They enabled ObamaCare, which includes massive government funding of abortion; appointments of justices to the US Supreme Court and appellate courts who routinely legislate from the bench and support abortion on demand without apologies, and an almighty government that's forcing individuals and corporations to fund and promote abortion-causing drugs. Without Mr. Obama and his like we wouldn't have homosexual marriage forced down our throats and face arrest for refusing to participate in whatever perversion is now politically correct. The list could go on.

America is now facing very difficult years ahead. But if everyone who holds to conservative and/or pro-life beliefs would research every candidate's stand on abortion—from the local school board to the president—and vote for the best viable option, with God's help we could turn things around.
